Baby Stolen With Car, Returned to Parents

EDMONTON (CP) month-old baby boy, missing for four hours, was reunited with his parents Monday night after the car in which he was sleeping was stolen from a shopping centre parking lot.

The baby's mother, Mrs. Dag Wiull, left the baby in the back seat and the car's engine running while she went into the shopping centre to get her husband, an employee there.

When they returned, the car and baby were missing.

About four hours later, a motorist driving in a residential district about two miles from the shopping centre noticed a car idling stopped to investigate.

He found the baby crying on the front seat and carried him into a nearby house where the residents notified police.

A police spokesman said the baby was apparently well and had suffered no serious effect.

Police believe the car thief abandoned the vehicle when he noticed the infant.

The girl, a student at the University of Louisville, brought suit against her father after he stopped paying ker tuition and other college bills. As is the practice in family court cases, neither has been publicly identified.

However, the Louisville Courier-Journal reached her and she said she is "destitute right now.' "I'm looking for a job. In fact, if they order a retrial, I can't afford to go back to New York."

The father, "a prominent member of the litigating bar," had acted, Midonick said, be-cause of a "loss of confi-dence" in his daughter's edu-

What Do We Do and Why?

IN A SPEECH EARLIER THIS month in Saint John, New Brunswick, Prime Minister Trudeau took occassion to address to the Maritimes some sound advice which should also be given close attention by the rest of Canada. His remarks encompassed nothing less than a generalized blueprint for the encouragement of Canadian industry to produce goods efficiently which have real consumer utility and which will not harm the environment - and to do this without the artificial prop of protective tariffs or government subsidies.

Too much industrial effort today, said Mr. Trudeau, results in "more noise, more waste, and more cost," when the same resources of man and machine could have produced "more adequate housing and health care, the beautification of our cities, the protection of our environment." What we get instead are "such non-essential items as useless electric gadgets and expensive articles with built-in obsolescence." These add "further strain to our energy commitments without any useful return," says Mr. Trudeau, and he observes: "items which add unnecessarily to the production of atmospheric wastes must surely be questioned by any sane society."

It is refreshing to have a political leader look into the gut issue of why we are producing what we produce today, and to question whether the expense of producing it, and the deterioration of our resources or living environment which this causes, are worth the product. Just being new and modern not sufficient reason for a product, he says, and the fact that their manufacture stimulates the economy and creates employment is not really a valid reason for the production of goods.

Mr. Trudeau emphasized that "the factor of quality of life is one that will increasingly be taken into account by both government and industry ... We should recognize the immense strain which we place upon our natural resources in our seemingly endless quest for a more materialistic society."

In other words, Mr. Trudeau wants us to take a look at what we are doing and judge whether it is worth doing. He sees our life on earth as an opportunity to live, not merely go through the motions of unthinking production, and this entails an examination of how much we are taking out of our world materially and spiritually - in exchange for what we are putting into it. Useless products whose manufacture uses up valuable energy and pollutes the air, land or water of our earth are certainly to be questioned in a world whose resources are rapidly dwindling and whose natural environment is showing serious signs of over-use and mis-

It is stimulating to have a philosopher at the head of government. It will be more than stimulating if he can translate some of that philosophy into material results.

A Statutory Watch-Dog

CANADA'S NATIONAL LAW Reform Commission is finally getting under way. Justice Migister Turner's appointment of Mr. Justice Patrick Hartt of the Ontario Supreme Court to be chairman of the Commission is in line with Mr. Turner's intention to appoint "young tigers" to that body. Mr. Justice Hartt has had a distinguished legal career - he practised criminal law under the outstanding criminal lawyer, Arthur Martin, and was appointed four years ago, at the age of 40, to the Ontario Supreme Court. His decisions since then have earned him even further professional and public respect.

The Law Reform Commission's first task will be to overhaul the Criminal Code, before moving toward its general goals: 1. To give the government objective machinery to review federal laws, 2. To act as an institution to which the public may direct serious grievances it may have regarding federal laws.

3. To give the cabinet the means to assess proposals which are submitted to it in order to amend existing laws or to pass new ones. 4. To carry out a critical study of federal laws.

Five other commissioners are to be appointed and the new body will not begin its deliberations until April first. Although the Commission represents a milestone in Canadian government, acting as a sort of legal ombudsman, the federal government has been tardy in following the lead of other jurisdictions: New York set up a law reform commission in 1934; New Zealand established its commission in 1937: Ontario in 1964: England in 1965; and B.C. last summer. The Canadian Commission will be a permanent feature of the federal landscape and, manned by experienced men who can refer also to the experience of similar bodies, should be a welcome weapon against the frequent tendency of laws to become anachronistic.

Anti-crime Pays, Too

IT IS A COMMENTARY ON THE _ the police at municipal, state and times that Wall Street sees ahead booming business in crimefighting. Agencies and institutions which provide civil protection and whose shares are offered for sale legitimately - are viewed as profitable investments. The current. revenue level of the industry; one analyst reports, is $1 billion annually - a four-fold increase over returns a decade ago.

The uniformed guard agencies, the armored carrier operators, and the central-station service organizations which keep around-the-clock watch on alarm systems, have an earning capacity that is attracting more and more stock-holders when their issues go on the market. It is... chilling to realize this booming business is apart from normal tax-provided law and order institutions:

national levels, and the special departments publicly financed to protect the citizen and his property.

The situation stirs uneasy questions; With peace officers paid for by citizens, is the march of crime so far outpacing peace-keeping that it is prudent to invest privately in specialized defence against 'public offenders? What strength does a police force need to do its job on terms acceptable to the ordinary citizen and to what extent is the general public to blame for the spreading crime waves?

The answers, on the basis of the Wall Street analysis, are not encouraging. And as long as it is a good investment to buy shares in the non-public guard services there is little ground for optimism.

Tangle-Footed Statesman-Salesman Role

IF only External Affairs Minister Migchell Sharp had been content with his role as statesman during his European visit, his message of free trade might have been better prosisted on playing the worried salesman as well. Now this is an exacting role to play when you have just sold someone (the European Common Market) $823 million in exports, consider-

Humphreys has sold you during Humphreys the year, 1969. The ECM commission estimated a trade surplus of $110 million in Canada's favor, GATT put it at

Despite the great discrepancy there is " no doubt that Canada is running a healthy surplus with the ECM. Nor is it doubted that the value of Canadian agricultural exports rose by $18 million to $206 million during 1969.

Here in Holland Canadian trade officials report that the unpegging of the dollar in June raised the cost of Canadian exports to Holland by at least five per cent with no apparent damage to sales. Exports to The Netherlands rose by 60 per cent during the first nine months of this year compared to the same period last year. Exports have been climbing steadily, giving Canada substantial surpluses in recent years. Into this booming atmosphere came Salesman Sharp, making two protests. In one, dealing with expansion of the ECM, he said, "I do suggest that the enlargement should not be and need not be achieved at the expense of countries

Alternatives

In the other, dealing with world trade, stood much of the time on the principle of liberalization. But this was not possible without belying the reason for that stand. On one occasion he said, "We stand to lose perhaps more than any other country from U.S. protectioncould be left with the choice between moving totally into the embrace of the U.S. or out into the cold."

One disadvantage of Mr. Sharp's approach was that in both cases he was foreseeing the future which he made a point of calling so unforeseeable in Brussels, referring to NATO. Certainly the future of Canadian trade with the ECM, is difficult now to calculate quite apart from the political uncertainties. The spectre of protectionism is not itself yet fact but fear.

Against Canadian fear the ECM is able to look at the past and the present and, with the help of Canada's own trade officials, paint quite a rosy picture and ask what all the fuss is about.

Does Mr. Sharp really expect the ECM enlargement to be at no expense to Canada? If so, why is Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin telling the Commons that there is no prospect of any major accommodation of Canadian interests in the short term and thatexports to Britain will be subject to the levies and tariffs of the ECM?

Rising Walls

It all depends, of course, on what is meant by "expense." In the short term, between 65 and 70 per cent of Canadian exports to Britain face higher tariffs or the loss of Commonwealth preferences. advantages in Britain, it will also face tougher competition as member countries of the ECM sell goods in the British market, duty-free.

In worrying at once about enlargement and protectionism Mr. Sharp is worrying about what many European free-traders sec, as the cure for the disease. One of the main reasons for Dutch enthusiasm for British entry is her outward-looking, trading traditions. They see in Britain a strong ally for the non-restrictive community Canada hopes

Meanwhile, Britain's attitude to nego tiations has also left Canada with little room for manoeuvre until a decision is reached on entry. During the last round of negotiations Britain was overly solicitous of Commonwealth interests. London went into the negotiations with a detailed list of products, seeking various forms of compensation.

Perhaps the most famous abuse of this course was the Canadian request to the British to see what they could do about church vestments, that well-known vital Canadian export. The earlier negotiations failed, not, of course, just because of the famous list, but it didn't help. And the present government isn't making the same mistake

New Zealand agriculture and developing countries' sugar. Far more important than either is the amount of the British financial contribution to the ECM budget. The government has decided that the best approach is to grasp wholeheartedly the principle of membership and pursue it with obvious enthusiasm. to look for principle and has found free Looking to the post-expansion Europe

Canada, as Mr. Pepin pointed out in the Commons, is not without bargaining

After the effects become clear Canada will be retaliating against British exports into the Canadian market. The British don't expect to eliminate preferences for Canadian goods without losing theirs in return. We won't be calling this retaliation, of course. It will be known as the process of "bringing into play at the appropriate stage the contractual rights and obligations under bilateral arrange-

No Money, Less Risk I should like to commend Bill Walker on his very fine commentary on rugby and the statistics he published covering fatalities in American and Rugby football during the year 1969.

All sport has some element of danger in fact it can be dangerous to cross the street. Rugby is one of the few remaining truly amateur sports left in the world and the Victoria Rugby Union a purely voluntary organization dedicates its efforts to promote this very fine amateur sport on the Island. The union provides coaches and referees free of charge for our public schools and in fact the members of the various rugby clubs on the Island pay annual fees to play rugby and belong to these clubs.

The use of helmets in rugby is completely impractical and in fact anyone with any knowledge of the game ould not have made such a suggestion. Rugby is played for the fun and sport of the game and no one is paid for any service. In these circumstances we foster the spirit of good sportsmanship. However, as in all sports, there are accidents but when we play the game for the sake of the game and not for money we feel we are reducing the element of over-zealousness and the excessive danof accidents .- M. A Troubled Pause in Israel's Struggle

THE tragic problem in the Holy City at Christmas time of 1970 was not only how to find peace, but how to be sure of the goodwill of its friends and the good faith of its enemies. There is a troubled pause here now. The people of Israel are enjoying the cease-fire in their war with the Arab states. They are using the pause to restore this lovely city, but their Govby fear and doubt fear of the menacing military move ments of the Soviet Union along the Suez, and doubt about the determination of their natural allies in Western Europe and even in the United States

It is a very old dilemma. The came up against it in Vietnam, and Israel now faces it under much more difficult circumstances in the Middle East. Can it afford to fight or not to fight again? And even; Can it afford to negotiate without the assurance of strong military and political support from the

On the face of it, this ancient logic seems disturbingly apt. Here stands Israel in its luminous light, with vast cumulous sea clouds floating above its bony hills an amazing fusion of sharpness and gentility - enveloped by hostile Arab states — Lebanon and Syria, and beyond them, Iraq in the north, Jordan in the East; Egypt, Yemen d Saudi Arabia in the south; 2.4 million Jews against 80 million Arabs, outgunned by the arsenal of Communism, except in the air, by roughly three to

Prime Minister Golda Meir presides over, all this confusion as if she had invented the women's liberation movement. She doesn't have a generation gap but a two-generation gap. Her granddaughter joined the Israeli army a week Her vote in the Israeli, cabinet counts for no more than any other Cabinet member. She is caught between powerful factions and individuals here who think she is either too tough or too easy, caught again in the power struggle between the great powers, yet she sits in her plain; little house analysing her problem with compelling serenity

Arms Problems

She has calculated the cost of building Israel's tower, she insists. She has concluded that Israel can build it and still prevail over the Arab millions; but that, she maintains, is not her problem It is simply that the Arabs are assured all the modern weapons, and all the political support they need from Moscow while Israel does not know whether she will get two or three planes a month from the U.S. and only has the assurance that Washington will "not be a party to any new United Nations resolution against her.

So Mrs. Meir is not very hopeful about peace in the comong year. Her experts report that the Egyptians now have Soviet surface-to-surface, as well as surface to-air, missiles, that Israel must assume there will be Soviet air support for the Arabs, even over the Sinai. She says she is "horrified" how the Western Europeans and even the U.S. watch this threat to Israel's and western Europe's security.

The old technical arguments continue and Israel is left with the fear that what she regards as vital to her security may not be regarded as "vital" to the U.S. For Israel, Mrs. Meir says, it is very hard to see or even to talk about the long future. The future is tonight, she says, or tomorrow, or next week. Beyond that she cannot be sure.

Not So Bleak

The situation here is probably not quite as bleak as officials make out They have to assume the worst, but they will negotiate (as announced Monday) even if they don't like the terms, and in the end they will probably find a formula they can live with. After all, Jerusalem survived by faith rather than by power. and so did the Jews, but for now they see their fate not in the sky but in the Skyhawks. They are holding back for more promises from Washington which they are not going to get, but that phase will pass soon after the beginning of the new year.

Already It Seems Shameful Moment in Our History

In the great October crisis of 1970, Canadian democracy was tested and found

The Trudeau government was revealed as totalitarian in spirit. The people were discovered to be hysterical. The press was shown as sycophantic

The provincial premiers and the offical Opposition in Parliament turned out to be, in a crisis, useless

Looking back from just this distance, it already seems a profoundly shameful moment in our history.

Professional historians, writing with more detachment twenty or thirty years from now, may rate it even worse than that: they may see it as a time when the basic freedor Canadian life began an inexorable process of

In Montreal that first terrible week of the War Measures Act, hundreds of Canadians were arbitrarily denied their rights — their right to liberty, their right to counsel, their right to know why they were being held in jail, their right to communicate with relatives and friends.

They were stripped, by an order of the federal cabinet, of all the personal rights that hundreds of years of history had bestowed on

The worst of it all was the lack of effective protest. On Friday, October 16, the morning when the War Measures Act was proclaimed, the most significant fact was that not one member of the federal cabinet

The government's action was clearly bitrary in the worst sense: surely, I reasoned, reading the papers that day, at least one of those twenty-nine men had the soul of a civil libertarian? But no. Not one. They all just sat there and took it.

In the days that followed, the reason was clear. Those silent men in the cabinet, and the many MPs who later sat silent with them, had correctly judged the public mood. The people of Canada wanted their fellow citizens' rights denied; they wanted those (alleged, supposed, possible) FLQ sympathizers thrown in jail. Thus the Canadians revealed that their most cherished beliefs were basically fraudulent.

By ROBERT FULFORD Saturday Night

The people of Canada, it turns out, believe not in civil rights but in civil rights when they are convenient; we believe not in individual liberty but in individual liberty when it does not get in the way of orderly government. Above all, we believe essentially in liberty for us, not for them.

To anyone but an hysteric it was obvious from the beginning that the federal govern-ment was dead wrong. Without invoking the War Measures Act, Ottawa had all the laws necessary to seek out the kidnappers and murderers and plotters. It had all the laws necessary to keep the army in place as support for the police.

The government pleaded, through the hints of various ministers, that there was something truly unthinkably awful going on; that the War Measures Act, with its many fascist-type provisions, was a necessity. The government couldn't tell us exactly what was going on, but if we would just trust the government for a while then . . .

To their lasting shame, most Canadians including most of those who call themselves civil libertarians — decided to trust the government and abandon their liberties." But in fact there was nothing the government could say that would have justified such an action - not bombings, not more kidnappings or murders, not hijackings, not even armed insurrection.

Indeed, anyone who cares about liberty, and who reads the War Measures Act and the regulations the government promulgated under it, will wonder whether such monstrous ns are justified even in actual war-

Does democracy best defend itself by destroying democracy?

If the government was wrong, why did it do what it did? I'm not sure we'll ever know; certainly the question will be argued, on half a dozen levels, for many years.

One answer is that this is, above all, a neat government. It likes to handle things in most convenient way. And the Measures Act, which gives the government the right to do exactly anything it wants, is the most convenient statute ever passed by a Canadian parliament.

It replaces cluttered, messy, slow-moving British justice with the clean, hard-edged efficiency of totalitarianism. In times of crisis, the War Measures Act is the neat man's natural resort. man's natural resort.

But there may have been another, more clearly political reason. The War Measures Act was — so it must have seemed in Ottawa a way to delegitimatize extremist feeling in Quebec, to throw an aura of criminality over all dissent to the left, say, of the Parti Quebecois (and maybe to parts of the PQ

In this sense the War Measures Act might have been expected to solve one of the country's major political questions; in this sense the FLQ kidnappings provided, for the government, an excuse

Of course, for most elements in the government this would have to be (one hopes) a subconscious desire. But it would be no less real for that.

CHURCH LINKED TO OPPRESSIVE REGIMES

Christianity's African Acid Test

By JACK HALPERN Manchester Guardian

"When the whites came to our country we had the land and they had the Bible; now we have the Bible and they have the land." So runs an African saying in Southern Africa.

With names like Moffat and Livingstone as part of our heroic folklore, it is often forgotten that even the most seldess of early white missionaries in Africa realized that trade and the flag would follow their Bible.

Indeed, many fine missionaries sincerely advocated this as the completion of their "civilizing mission." At a later date, of course, there were men, like Dr. Phillip, in South Africa, who led-the fight for the abolition of slavery, but formal slavery has been only one phase, if the most horrific, of the colonial process.

The question which faces Christianity in Southern Africa today is to what extent organized religion has continued to support, or failed to sincerely oppose, the State once that State had become the instrument of racialistic white minority rule and the economic exploitation of the Africans. In South Africa, in Southern Rhodesia, in Mozambique and in Angola this is, for Christianity, the acid test.

It is this inescapable question which underlies the controversy surrounding the visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury to South Africa.

And it is the same issue which is the centre of the much greater controversy now raging over the decision by organized Protestantism outside of white-ruled Africa to give financial support, through the World Council of Churches, for non-military purposes to African move-ments who have come to see violence as the only way left to them of attaining the freedom and full human dignity which Christianity preaches.

What, then, is the modern record and present stance of the churches in Southern Africa? Even in outline, important basic facts and trends emerge clearly.

Thus all the churches have a long record not only of missionary but of medical and especially of educational work. It is the degree to which this work has reinforced the State or has tended to oppose governmental injustice which varies.

Clearest of all is the position in Portuguese-ruled Mozambique and Angola. Portugal has long been intertwined with Roman Catholicism, which is its official national faith, and has profited greatly, from this in

As Professor Marcelo Caetano, who has now succeeded Dr. Salazar as Portugal's Prime Minister, wrote in 1951: "In earlier centuries the form which the Portuguese interest in the natives assumed was the concern of bringing to him the message of the Gospel so as to...save his soul. Simultaneously, however, the Portuguese saw the necessity of taking advantage of the unused riches of the new worlds.

Under Dr. Salazar's regime, legislation from its early years on accorded Roman Catholic missions a privileged position, which they retain today, as the logical "instrument" of civilization and national influence in Portugal's African colonies - the semantic legerdemain of designating them as "Overseas Provinces" came later to ward off mounting international criticism and UN interference when Portugal joined that organization.

In 1940 a Concordat was signed between the Vatican and the Portuguese State. Since 1941 subsidies to other than Roman Catholic missions have been forbidden by the

The purpose and nature of Portuguese Roman Catholic mission work was defined in 1960 by the most influential of all Portuguese churchmen, Cardinal influential of all Portuguese churchmen, Cardinal Cerejeira, Patriarch of Lisbon and a close lifelong associate of Dr. Salazar: "Schools are necessary, yes; but schools which teach the native the path of human dignity and the grandeur of the nation which protects

As for self-determination and democracy, the Portuguese hierarchy's position has been even more explicitly put very recently by Archbishop Custodio Alvin Pereira of Lourenco Marques.

In the Catholic newspaper "Diario," whose contents must, of course, pass the censor, he wrote: "Left to itself, this part of the continent is not capable of self-government. This is a responsibility of old Europe and the Church of Christ."

He added that the Church alone possessed the energy and spiritual force capable of saving the world, and especially Africa from the errors of communism.

This official "holy crusade" line has as its most dier of the Portuguese armed forces, Antonio dos Reis Rodrigues, who is responsible for raising the Portuguese troops' morale in their now 10-year-old and increasingly brutal African colonial wars.

Over the years of Salazar's rule there have however, been two or three bishops who have criticized Portugal's colonial rule, notably the Bishop of Luanda in Angola and the late Archbishop of Beira in Mozambique. They were able to do so publicly because bishops pastoral letters alone are not subject to government

And with the progress of the colonial wars, which the Africans took up in Angola in 1961, there has been growing unrest and criticism within the ranks of the Portuguese Church.

The critics, especially if they are black, have been increasingly harshly dealt with by the DGS (formerly PIDE, the political police). They come mainly from the ordinary priesthood, but they have included the Bishop of Oporto, who was banished from Portugal from 1960 to

Not surprisingly, the African clergy and a number of foreign Catholic fathers are known to support the African liberation movements. And in Portugal itself a clandestine Roman Catholic discussion group named GEDOC accused Bishop Brigadier Rodrigues of using the Church to "sanctify" the government's colonial wars. This internal unrest has been strengthened by the development which has worried the Portuguese hierarchy the most since 1961: Its steadily deteriorating relations

Three Papal Encyclicals — John XXIII's "Mater Magistra" and "Pacem in Terris," followed by Paul VI's "Populorum Progressio," which endorsed the right of every people to self-determination — have implicitly contradicted Portuguese theory and practice, and were published only in censored form in the Portuguese press. The Pope's visit to India, which had regained the Portuguese colony of Goa, was seen as a slab in Portugal's back, and his meeting at Kampala with leaders of independent African States hierarchies are heavily Africanized — was seen as an implicit criticism of the Portuguese.

Positively traumatic, however, was the Pope's reception in July of this year of the leaders of the African liberation movements, to whom he reportedly handed copies of his "Populorum Progressio."

The Salazar regime since 1926 and the Portuguese hierarchy have deeply mistrusted the various Protestant missions which founded, during the preceding secularized Republic, the major part of what scanty educational facilities exist for Africans in the Portuguese colonies.

Constantly harassed, these Protestant missions have rightly been accused of being the major source of what truthful information reached the outside world. Since 1961, however, when the liberation wars began, the Portuguese have fixed on the Protestant missions in their frenetic search for a scapegoat; harassment has turned into persecution, and they have steadily been driven out.

Thus, with the exception of this small Protestant minority, institutionalized Christianity in Angola and Mozambique has betrayed its message and social responsibilities so far as to make it the enemy of the African population's just aspirations.

Those Galloping Insurance Rates

An Editorial

The utter ineffectuality of the provincial government's fiddling with automobile insurance appears about to be most painfully brought home by the rate increases threatened by B.C. spokesmen for the insurance companies. Somewhere, the motorist who had pinned faith on the royal commission appointed by the government four years

The government itself was unable to cope with the conflict between the insurance industry and floundered somewhere in between with legislation that, despite revision, failed to avert the imposition of higher premiums this year.

has been led terribly

Now we learn that the runaway gallop in insurance rates was hardly even slowed and that next year's premiums are likely to go up as much or more than this year's. This time, however, there is not the excuse of government interference to rationalize the suggested in-our horror we are informed that (disregarding the provincial legislation) B.C. insurance costs are leaping ahead of the national average.

Against this disconcerting news must be balanced the disclosure by insurers that actual claims paid in the past year in B.C. increased only $1.3 million, or a little less than 21/2 per cent.

Yet, curiously, the threatened increase in rates is almost 12 per cent. This anomaly certainly deserves explanation. It seems difficult to believe that the 18 per cent margin between premiums collected and claims paid. even if lower than previously, is insufficient to keep the insurance industry solvent.

Questions such as this, as well as the apparent failure of government legislation to bring about consumer relief in general, ought to be under strict scrutiny by some form of regulatory agency.

Such an agency was, in fact, proposed by the Wootton Royal Commission, as one of its members, University of B.C. expert Peter Lusztig, has now recollected.

OTTAWA In feudal times, the basis of power was ownership of land on which to raise food. For our grandfathers, power lay with those who owned industry for the production of goods. For us, the source of power is science, and the crucial issues revolve around the control of research and deent and the social and political implications.

"Those who are not conwith the use scientific power are abdicat-ing their political functions." The quotation is from the British minister of technology last year, and it is warmly approved in the recent report of Senate Committee Science Policy. But for many of us, science is an intimidating subject. It conjures pictures of modern magicians in white coats working in vast laboratories, backed by humming com-puters, and dealing with nimaginably complex mysteries.

They put the game back in the pits on the weekend. Defence was the rule in pro football's frenzied fight for Super-Bowl status. The golden rule in some cases. The glamor backs got upstaged for the most part by the linemen. And one quarterback stood out over all the rest.

When the action started on Saturday, the field was down to eight teams. Now there are four. After next Sunday there will be only two. They will decide it all in Miami on Jan. 17.

And if the weekend happenings didn't all go as expected, or predicted, the lineman can take the credit, and deserve it. In only one game was there 21 points put on the board by one team, and that came late in the contest at Oakland. And who would have thought that San Francisco could get by Minnesota with the meagre total of 17? The other two games were shutouts, the one in Dallas, against Detroit, by the unlikely baseball socore of 5-0. It all spells d-e-f-e-n-c-e.

Of course, the saddest community of all in a saddened Minnesota had to be Minneapolis. The home-town Vikings chucked it after getting an early break and a touchdown on a San Francisco fumble. Their next and only other score was a TD in the last second of the game. In between, the '49ers were superior, in a wicked battle of rugged line play.

And if the line play of both clubs was that close in performance until the Vikings finally gave way, the match-up of the quarterbacks certainly wasn't. John Brodie of the '49ers went into the fray as the best in the NFL this season. Still the Vikings were favored. Because, hadn't Gary Cuozzo proved to be an able replacement for Joe Kapp, and hadn't the Vikings under his leadership equalled their best record ever?

But the expected Cuozzo-Brodie duel never materialized. It was a mismatch from just after the start. Brodie had all the poise and finesse of a confident whiler. Cuozzo seemingly never recovered from an early interception on a poorly thrown ball when the Vikings were threatening to score.

The TV announcer made a great point, too, about Minnesota coach Bud Grant's "hurrying the quarterback" statistic. But it wasn't working to Minnesota's advantage this day. The '49ers made certain of that. It was Cuozzo, not Brodie, who was the man in a hurry most of the time.

Or, as the man said, it's the good quarterbacks who win the

In Oakland, the Raiders proved a point all over again. They like to do it the hard way—by coming from behind. They spotted the best rushing team in the league, Miami Dolphins, an early touchdown, and then beat them handily. The defence took over while the offence became unstuck, and the last

Miami score didn't really mean much.

And if another significant point was made, it was that George Blanda is human after all. He missed a field goal from inside the 30. Not by much, mind. But he missed. The ball hit the upright. He may not be able to afford such latitude next in Baltimore.

Meanwhile, in Baltimore, the Colts won as they pleased against Cincinnati, but they didn't show much offence doing it. Perhaps they didn't have to, because after all, the Bengals didn't beat many winners when they won their last seven games in the regular season. They weren't considered a threat games in the regular season. They weren't considered a inreat, either. The surprise was the relatively poor showing of Baltimore quarterback Johnny Unitas. He wasn't the Johnny U of old, and will have to do better next week against Oakland to disprove it. This will be a different test than Cincinnati, and the Colt defence can't really be expected to keep the Raiders off the scoreboard, as they did the Bengals.

In Dallas, the Cowboys proved their worth in another rugged battle of the defences. And now they haven't given up a touchdown over five whole games. This is a fine record of consistency which speaks for itself. Five points isn't much to get by on in this era of explosive football. But the Cowboys did, get by on in this era of explosive football. But the cowpuys una, and did it well. As a matter of fact, it was only a slender three-point edge they were tenaciously clinging to for most of the

Out of the game, however, came the indisputable fact that their offence wasn't exactly overwhelming. Sure it was a tough Detroit defence, but San Francisco has one too. That's the next test. And it does seem unlikely the Cowboys can get by again, on defence alone on defence alone.

Besides, they will be playing in San Francisco's kome park—the last time ever that pro football will be played in Kezar Stadium. If tradition doesn't demand a '49er victory, the San Francisco defence and Brodie do.

He gets the best protection in the NFL, and he's got the best record of completions to prove it. Which should lead that '49ers to the Super Bowl. With Oakland.

Golf Pros Ready to Embark On Richest Tour in History

NEW YORK (AP) - The 1971 professional golf tour will be the busiest and richest in history, Joseph C. Dey Jr., commissioner of the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament Players' Division, said Mon-

Sixty-three tournaments are scheduled or are under negotiation for 1971 and they do not include the Ryder Cup and World Cup competitions. In 1970 there were a record 55 tournaments.

Prize money in 1971 will total $7,124,801 compared to $6,751,523 this year. The tour begins in Los Angeles next week

The satellite tour also will be increased in 1971 with 15 tournaments, compared to six in 1970, and will be worth $445,000.

Eight tournaments in 1971 will have prize money of at least $200,000 on the assumption that the PGA championship, the U.S. Open and the Masters will again be in that category. Topping the list will be the Westchester Classic June 22-25 with a gross of $250,000.

The PGA will be played Feb. 25-28 at Palm Beach, Fla.; the Masters April 8-11 at Augusta, Ga., and the U.S. Open June 17-20 at Ardmore, Pa.

Diver Again Best

Beverly Boys, who won both diving gold medals at the British Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh last summer, is Canada's woman athlete of the year for the second consecutive year.

The 19-year-old from Pickering, Ont., now living and training in Winnipeg, was an easy winner in the poll conducted by The Canadian Press among 165 sports writers and broadcasters across the country.

But it was close for second, with skier Betsy Clifford of Ottawa edging high-jumper Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., who repeated at third.

SLALOM VICTORIES

Points were awarded on a 3-2-1 basis for first, second and third votes.

Miss Boys drew 48 firstplace votes, 45 for second and 30 for third for 264 points.

Miss Clifford: 17, who skis out of Camp Fortune, Que., out of Camp Fortune, Que., won the gold medal in the world championships in giant slalom last February. Shortly after this year's balloting was completed, she won the women's special slalom at the Criterium de la Premiere Neige-World Cup competition at Val d'Isere, France.

Angela Coughlan of Burling ton, Ont., who won a swim-ming gold in the Common-wealth Games by taking the women's 100-metre freestyle, received 102 points.

Barbara Simpson of Cal-Prix of Harrisburg in the Pennsylvania Horse Show last October, got 69 points.

It was the performance of Miss Boys in Edinburgh that attracted the voters.

INJURED EAR

She suffered a punctured right eardrum during practice in Montreal in October, 1969. The injury kept her out of the water for three weeks but healed and she won the national indoor championships a month later.

She practised hard for Edinburgh, but once there the ear trouble flared again.

The crop-haired, five-footone youngster had to have her ear packed, then taped, then covered with waterproof plastic material before each

In spite of the painful process, she won both the three-metre springboard and the 10-metre tower events as the Canadian girls swept all but one place in the diving.

Such controls will be meaningful only if a monitor-ing network is established to examine and keep watch on the province's atmosphere.

This is the key recom-mendation of a report on Air Quality in B.C., prepared for the department of lands, forests and water resources by a team from B.C. Re-search, Vancouver. The re-Vancouver. The report is under review by the government.

What are the air pollutants that have made seology a matter for urgent consideration in so short a period of time? And what are the effects on man which have made the matter such an urgent one?

Unwanted junk in the air we breathe may be divided four classes dustfall suspended particulate matter, aerosols and gases.

Dustfall and more visible air pollution are being attacked. The other three are the targets of ecologists now.

Prime offenders are sulphur and its compounds. Sulphur occurs in minute quantities as an element in the atmosand also in its manaltered form as unpleasantsmelling hydrogen sulphide and mercaptans (sulphur al-cohol compounds).

Burning fuels like coal and oil, sulphuric acid plants, sulphite puip mills and metal-lurgical plants all produce sulphur oxides. Mercaptans and hydrogen sulphide are produced through the coking of coal, distillation of tar, natural gas production, some chemical processes, i n a dequately treated sewage, and garbage dumps. All these processes are carried out in

Sulphur oxides can injure man, damage vegetation and materials and reduce visi-bility. They are initially the most objectionable of the air contaminants because of their unpleasant odor. Concentrations in B.C. air range from parts per million to parts per billion. In the range of 1 to 5 parts per million, most persons show a detectable response, and exposure to 5 or more parts per Still greater toxic response is produced in humid condi-tions, when sulphuric acid aerosols form.

The most dangerous of the prevalent air pollutants is the odorless, colorless carbon

The gas is a chief product of fuel combustion, and the internal combustion (auto) engine is a prime offender here. Slash burning and forest fires also are important sources in B.C.

At 100 parts per million in the air, most persons experi-ence dizziness and headaches, 1,000 parts per million quickly kills.

* * * Concentrations greater than 100 occur locally in garages, tunnels and heavy traffic. Average concentrations of 5 to 10 parts per million are common in B.C. cities.

There is scientific disagreement whether the gas is a cumulative poison — whether continued exposure to small amounts will build up to a toxic level.

But there is no doubt that smokers have increased amounts of carbon monoxide in their blood, because burning tobacco yields high amounts of the gas.

In high concentrations, monoxide combines carbon monoxide combines with other pollutants, including hydrogen sulphide and nitrogen dioxide, to produce an effect more serious than the sum of the effects of each

In other words, the combination of the gases produces an effect worse in the final analysis than their effects would be individually.

Arts Festival for Duncan

DUNCAN - The newly-formed Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council will sponsor a week-long arts festival in Duncan in April.

The festival was made possible by a $3,365 operating grant from the provincial cultural fund.

Will MacKenzie, a director of the council, said the festival, which will include works by painters, sculptors, potters, thespians, dancers, musicians, coincide with the Vancouver Island Drama Festival to be held in Duncan.
"We will try to bring in several guest artists and we want to see as many arts as possible represented at the festival," he said.

Territory of the arts council is identical to that of the Cowichan Valley Regional District, including the Sooke area on the island's west coast.

STORM-TOSSED SEAS and their loads of logs hurtled through this ditch at the foot of Killarney in Saanich Monday, making a shambles of the yards of Mrs. H. A. Jones, whose home is seen atthe left of the ditch, and of Mr. and Mrs. Bert de Goey, from whose home this picture was taken. Killarney residents have signed a petition asking that the ditch be closed. The ditch is used by the municipality as a rain drain-off for the area and municipal engineer Neville Life says if the property owners used fill to raise their land above the waterline, the drainoff could then be diverted by ditch along adjacent Waring Place. Rural Domination Of Region Denied

Comments by a Victoria alderman about regional government are "riddled with inaccuracies," Saanich mayor inaccuracies," Saanich mayor and Capital Regional District board chairman, Hugh Curtis, said today.

He was replying to Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen, who urged amalgamation of the city and Saanich to head off control of the area by a regional government dominated by rural interests. (See Page 29)

Curtis pointed to the vote and director distribution on the regional board and said the more populated parts have the weight of votes.

Mobile Homes Settle Down

By PAULINE GRAVES

If you follow the sun with a second house, mobile, or live in a mobile home the year round, you are one of a million or so people who do the same. And the mobile home industry foresees a doubling of its business in the next decade. Therefore, ideas for mobile homes are much in order.

designed by architect Parry Berkus, A.I.A., and decorated by Darrell Howe, is in a mobile modular home. Which means that it was factory produced and truck-towed to its site. Any resemblance to the early metal trailers first developed for holiday travelers has been lost in evolu-tion. This, instead, has a look of permanence, thanks to extensive use of wood and a thin plaster coat on the walls.

Dominating the room, are the bedside tables, ledges, actually, built along the wall and supported at the beds by being routed one-half inch into the two-by-six headboard frames. The ledges, also, are two inches thick and are eighteen inches deep, with two-by-eight brackets under neath. Because there are no legs, the ledges look "light" in spite of the heavy wood and the dark finish. Noté that headboard panel idea could be duplicated by using fabric panels and embroi-dered designs.

Although it is hung from the wall, this headboard appears to be an architectural feature and adds an air of permanence to a modular home

So what do you do for the post-Christmas let down?

It's a very difficult time of the year. First of all, every-one's so tired. Those lafe-night shopping tours and present-wrapping bustles really cause a lot of loss of

This leads to edginess This leads to edginess which in turn makes it hard to fall asleep. So my first prescription for the after-Christmas "blahs" is to take a hot bath, preferably with lots of nice bubbles in it (if you're a lady, that is or you're a lady, that is—or maybe men like bubble baths too in this age of Aquarius).
I usually take a good mystery book with me and periodically "top up" the bath with more hot water. Then get a hot water bottle or turn the electric blanket up, and hop into bed around 8 or 9 p.m. Even if you don't sleep at that early hour you'll rest. at that early hour, you'll rest. And you've earned it.

Secondly, try a little exer cise. Not too strenuous. And you'll work off all those extra centimetres, which came with the plum pudding and Dad's fudge which you raided, in a few days. But I find a few minutes a day of yoga exercises to be wonderfully invigorating yet restful too. Try it and see if you agree

My next thought is to do something nice for someone. This is usually the time when I take pains to thank, in some material way, those people who serve me through the year. I know most people try to do this before Christmas. But one year I saw my poor postie struggling along with a large paper bag with "a few mementoes" as well as his heavy mail sack. Then I decided it wasn't the best time of the year to load him up with extra goodies.

In addition to being a more practical time for giving, this tradition gives me a little lift when I need it.

I can take a couple of minutes to that with the dustman, the paper boy and the postman. It's often the only time of the year I can take the time to say hello and wish them a good New Year.

Does anyone else have ideas for how to combat this blue period? I know it's a really tricky time, because when I worked in a psychiatric clinic many clients became considerably more depressed at this time. So please let me know your way to cope with the New Year letdown.

. And have a beautiful and happy 1971.

In 45 years as a profes-sional matchmaker, he has arranged 3,000 weddings. He claims that only five of them ended in divorce. Ishizaka says the secret of his success in matching brides and bride grooms is total honesty.

By JILL TWEEDIE LONDON — Kathrin Perutz s a tall slim 31-year-old New is a tall slim 31-year-on recover. "In America, every man and woman makes themselves Sell thyself is the leading motto, and so an American has to package and present himself—he exists in a world of objects with himself as the supreme object. It terrifies me, a society where the human being is so objectified and of course, the responsi-bility weighs so heavily that, in the end, Americans seek safety in comforming."

In her book Miss Perutz

explores the conditioning of very young girls towards this ideal mass presented ideal mass presentation of themselves (makeup kits and wigs for 10-year-olds); the cult of youth that ignores any possibility of aging or death; the social and psychological significance of beauty rituals among all kinds of women from the rich and idle—"Visits to the hairdresser or to consultants on skin problems give an illusion of purpose"—to women prisoners and the mentally sick—"Paranoids are careful to present an outside manner and appearance that is per-fectly correct."

felt if only someone would say 'you're pretty,' the whole world would change. And I'm not over it yet, though I'm better than I was. I put on make-up to come and meet you because you're a stranger and this is a formal situation but at least I'm now capable of "speech" when I have no make up on. Some-times, you know, I think I'm times, you know, I think I'm the most beautiful thing in the world — beautiful and a the world — beautiful and a genius and sexy and I can't imagine that everyone doesn't want to be me. At other times I just feel a freak and can't see any reason why anyone should love me. It was only after I'd written my first book that I stopped bleaching my hair platinum:

So perhaps, by writing, you can transfer some of the power of looks to the power of achievement bolster you self-doubts and self-hatred this way?

"Now, do you really think that helps? You go to a party where you don't know anyone. You light a cigarette, you go to the ladies, and still no attention. You tell yourself you're superior to that girl over there, the one, that man's talking to. She's a flibbertigibbet, you are thinking about Vietnam and God. But you'd give it all up in 'a But you'd give it all up in a minute just to have five men rush to bring you a drink"

So, in the end, where do you draw the line between healthy attention to looks and raying narcissism? That, for women and a slowly increasing number of men, is the 64,000-dollar question.

It's very difficult to say. think it depends on class, in geography. A New York career girl has a different range of cosmetic possibilities from an Arkansas housewife as a New Yorker, if you rushed into midi-skirts the moment they appeared, that would not show an unusual concern with appearance. If you did the same thing in Texas, it would ... In a way, conforming with make-up and appearance to your peers shows "lack" of vanity — you don't want to stand out, you simply want to merge."

At the end of Beyond the Looking Glass, Kathrin Perutz outlines her own image of herself, her own progress in the beauty culture. She is married to a good looking Englishman, and she thinks of herself as "a presentable woman." Her husband likes her best when she has on no make-up at all lets the hair grow under her arms and on her legs and wears no bra. But she can't comply, she feels too ugly.

Dashing Through The Stores . . .

Things happened backwards in Victoria stores Monday. Shoppers came in laden with parcels and low on cash. They left with lighter loads and heavier pockets.

The stores started the day a little more barren than usual, with bulging tills prepared for a beating. And they got it. By 11 a.m., chaos reigned.

A clerk in one department store was overheard whispering to another, "I think we're running out of money."

The stores were so crowded, it was hard to believe Christmas was past.

And the people were seasonally jolly. The shoppers, that is. The clerks were being run off their feet.

One was actually run over.

She had arrived early to start marking down prices. She said, "I was sitting in the aisle marking stuff down when I heard the store announce it was open. Suddenly people came charging up the stairs and tripped over me before I had a chance to stand up."

In her department - Christmas decorations - there were two rows of people, 25 deep, waiting to have their purchases rung up by 9:30 a.m. By noon it hadn't changed.

Did someone say something about shopping early to avoid

Elephant Walks Into Style

PARIS - Furs may be getting a leather has bad name. but has never been more Merlender of France, one of the great status names in the couture leather world, is doing so well that it has opened a New York salon just off Fifth Avenue on West 58th

For a quarter of a century, fashion houses such as Dior, Lanvin, Saint Laurent and Patou have relied on Mer-lender to make up their ideas for leather, while Merlender has its own custom salon on the Faubourg St. Honore. The Manhattan salon is also for custom work.

Accustomed as most of us are to a limited number of leathers, Merlender offers an eye opener to the extent leathers can be used. Right now, for example, they're using elephant. What's more, it can even be pink elephant. At least, a pink elephant leather maxi coat was dis-played at their recent New York Opening, according to sources in the Paris house.

sources in the Paris house.

We ourselves saw two coats in grey elephant, both, as it happened, for men. One was a maxi coat, priced at $1,440 (remember, it is custommade for each buyer), while the other was about kneelength, in classic balmacan style. The handling of the elephant leather was superb, both in bringing out the natural markings, which are both in bringing out the natural markings, which are never the same from one coat

Glamor Goes Down The Drain

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Waile I don't want to sound like a Scrooge, there is one thing which I find irritating about the holiday season. It's a professional irritation, of course, caused by the really dreadful effect that the season of cheer seems to have upon women's clothes.

Suddenly everyone's day-time cost um e seems to degenerate into a pile of mismatched fabrics. On the head a crocheted thing dan-gling with plastic gling with plastic discs.
Around the neck a colorless muffler which has become nothing but a twisted rope. An ample, shapeless coat drapes the frame, usually uneven of hemline and not matching whatever is worn beneath. Add boots; slushed up and muddy, and you have the costume of the average December shopper.

Oh, I forgot! Complete the picture with assorted bundles and shopping bags dragging at the side.

The change in women's clothes is so apparent that one can only assume they keep them somewhere all year just to bring them out for year-end shopping. Considering the chore it can be, there is probably some reason that one dresses in this why one dresses in this manner. Why ruin one's best fashions fighting one's way through the crowds?

Then one goes to a holiday party. Is it the shopping or the dazzle of Yule which makes so many women think that any old brocade will do? There they come, those turquoise chiffons and pale pink brocades which have done yeoman service for the last decade and surely can do for one more season?

I want to shout that they didn't do for last season, either, and how about honorable retirement!

Although I'm not always a pants enthusiast, those tired brocades make me whoop inwardly with joy at sight of a well-tailored black pants suit with a jewelled neckline. Nothing very startling, but at Jieast not a sheath in pale pink brocade.

One wonders, sometimes, at these parties, who is buying all the great new evening dresses one saw a few weeks ago in the showrooms of Seventh Avenue. Where did the glamorous "gypsy" styles go? Where are the unusual-color combinations being worn?

It's all the more strange when I realize that I'm in New York, supposedly the fashion capital of the country. This holiday season, when the ladies aren't wearing tired brocades, they are deciding to brighten the scene by looking like guerrilla warriors from the bush. Knicker, boots and the bush, Knicker, boots and a cartridge belt are the latest thing among those who seek publicity through what they were. Very suitable for the season of peace on earth, goodwill to men.

Oh, well, back to the Oh, well, back to the brocades. At least they have a gentle sparkle in the Yule lights, not the flash of bullet carbons worm around some casings worn around some to another, and in the shading of the grey. Snakeskins have been popular for some time, so naturally a couture-level house like Merlender has to use more exotic skins that do ordinary places. Karung, an eel-like pebbly-texutred water snake with ombred markings, found on Singapore beaches, is used for a man's jacket styled in battlejacket manner.

For women, anaconda, from the land of the Senghalese, is given a velvety sueded finish, and turned into a pants suit. Yoga anaconda, its surface patterned rather like a pine cone, is translated into a hooded cape. Other exotic reptiles include chourts from Persia and Indian lizard. Persia and Indian lizard.

Like most Paris couture Merlender is the of one man, the creation father of the present owner, 27-year-old Sylvain Merlender. It is supported by some two dozen leather craftsmen many of whom have been with the firm since its founding 25 years ago.

M. Sylvain Merlender admits he was not too active in the firm before his father's death. He is even Americap-educated, holding degrees from the University of Cali-fornia and the University of Washington in both chemistry and business administration.

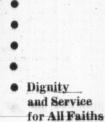

He worked in cancer re-earch and interplanetary rocket engines, neither of which would seem to have much connection with the family leather firm. However, Merlender takes the Euro pean attitude that any kind of education influences other fields. His scientific back-ground he brings to bear on the handling of leather, while his business administration training is now put to use in his own firm.

Skins at Merlender must always be of top quality, inspected as if they were diamonds to exclude any with flaws. The design of garments may reflect fashion trends, but each one is executed with perfect tailoring.

The current collection features a dress in spruce green velour and satiny pewter-color leather, a midi coat in shiny balck python, another in burgundy-color python with black fox borders, and lots of travel separates in suede of vibrant colors. Signature bags, scarves and hats are available also available.

New York Doves Buy Belt-Full of Bullets

ELEPHANT HIDE COATS

. . . some come in pink

There's no accounting these days for fashion tastes. Would you believe a cartridge belt, bullets and all, worn as a fashion accessory?

Right now in New York a fad has mushroomed among the moneyed fashionables for real or simulated cartridge belts. Apparently, the belts were first spotted in a London men's shop, but why the lady store executive who saw them thought they would be great women remains a mystery.

However, she was right. Despite the current fashion turnover to soft, longer styles fashionables have apparently reverted to the 'touch chic' look of the Sixties. They're tucking pants into boots and around their hips or across their chests

The fad doesn't even suit the current "peace loving" climate. Most of the women wearing the cartridge are very active in the peace faction, yet they profess to find the cartridge belt "cute and amusing." them to parties, but others even go on the street with them. A number of stores and boutiques in New York are carrying them, although they won't say whether approve. Some bou however, have turned down the chance to carry the belts, saying that they would

Pets' Rights Count Too

By HILDA BEASTALL

By HILDA BEASTALL

Cats and dogs within their owners' gardens are seldom detrimental to the gardens. I have concluded after 30 years of gardening with the companionship of both that it all depends on whether we consider the animals as having any rights of their own.

In the first place we must acknowledge that we keep the animal for our own satisfaction, therefore we owe a debt of gratitude in the form of consideration.

The cat or dog must have scratching areas, and exercise areas. If these are provided, neutered or spayed cats and dogs seldom stray voluntarily from their own territory.

Cats particularly must have freshly cultivated, humusy soil for their digging. Hilda
This is why loud wails of anguish come over the fence from the neighbors who cultivate assiduously at a time when the cat's owner has not yet commenced activity. The smell of freshly turned soil is on the air, and the cat traces it, digs prodigious holes, covers them into seemingly huge mounds and scampers off gaily with a job well done, And this is typical of a cat's natural instinct. The freshly turned soil contains all the bacteria to break down the waste material left by the cat. Within a week, there is nothing recognizable remaining.

This is where the obligation must be met by the cat's owner (I use this term loosely, knowing that no one owns a cat in the accepted meaning).

Even in winter it is necessary to loosen, cultivate and continually turn over certain small patches of good soil for the use-of the cat.

And provide a couple of cedar scratching posts, one an inch square, the other two inches square. Drive them firmly into the ground, leaving 24 inches above for exercising. This saves furniture, rugs, and legs.

Dogs are less obliging in their efforts to keep our own or the neighbor's garden clean. But they can be trained.

The neatest trick I ever saw was a small black Pomeranian let out of the house on snowy mornings and running full tilt along the narrow shovelled pathway to her own corner. own corner.

own corner.

This was a boarded-in square for compost-making, and Pom's deposits were gratefully added to this mixture every day or two. In the enclosure, she could scratch around among the debris as much as she wanted, and in bad weather the long pathway gave her some exercise.

Pom had the run of the place normally, but a careful owner who was also a devoted gardener sent her off to her corner regularly. Everyone was happy. There was no

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN In today's deal, which arose in a recent overseas rubber-bridge game, our South debridge game, our South de-clarer failed to fulfill a game contract that he could (and should) have made. Can you find declarer's misplay? South deals.

SOUTH • 9 6 4 2 • A K • A K

The bidding: South West 14 - Pass 3 NT Pass South 1.4 -3 NT Pass

Opening lead: Five of 4.

On West's opening lead of the spade five, dummy's queen was put up. East capturing the trick with his king. A spade return now drove out the board's ace.

Dummy's jack of clubs was then ted, and when East played the four-spot, South put up his ace, hoping that West had been dealt the west had been dealt the singleton king. When the king failed to drop, declarer led another club. Upon taking his king, West then cashed three more spade tricks. The result was down one. What was declarer's error?

Declarer, incidentally, was quite correct in spurning the club finesse. West might have had five spades and the singleton king of clubs. Declarer's error was the taking of the spade finesse at trick one. Instead, he should have won the trick with the board's ace. Let us see why?

If the seven outstanding spades were divided 4-3, then it didn't matter what declarer played, for all he would then lose would be three spades

But if the seven outstanding spades were divided 5-2, then his contract by putting up dummy's ace. In this case, East would now have remain-ing either the singleon king. the singleton jack, or the singleton 10. When declarer next attacked the clubs, he would lose to West's king. West would then return a spade to East's king — but East would have no spade to play back. If, in theory, East's singleton had been the pack or 10, the same 17 Free verse result would have prevailed. Upon winning with the club king. West would then play his (hypothetical) king of his (hypothetical) king of spades, felling his partner's (hypothetical) jack or 10. South's remaining 9-6 would now effectively prevent West from cashing his spade suit.

The only time the refusal to finesse at trick one would be a losing play would be if West had started with the guarded club king and the K-J-10-x-x of spades. But had West held this hand, he surely would have made a non-vulnerable overcall of South's opening one club bid.

Tour friend Ken Miller.

INMAN-in loving memory of my dear husband. Harry Inman and father, who passed away Dec. 23, 1965.

We often sik and livink of him.

We often sik and livink of him. We often sit and think of him When we are all alone. For memory is the only friend That grief can call its own. Like ivy on the withered oak, when all other things decay, Our love for him will still Ecop green and never fade away. Remembered always by his wife. Alice and daughters. Merna and Audrey.

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS. 4:30 p.m., Preschool Play-5 p.m., Ladies First; 6 p.m., Project Travel, Panorama of a Province and Sunshine in St. Lucia; 6:30 p.m., You and the Law, with Saanich Police Sgt. Bill Chisholm; 7 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen, fishing edition; 7:30 p.m., B.C. Tel Science Series, Strange Case of the Cosmic Rays.

NANCY. 6 p.m., Channel 2. Minor budget problems of newlyweds - not uncommon among newlyweds - escalate into a major disaster when the president sends his top economic EDDIE'S FATHER. 7 p.m., Channel 8. Mrs. Livingston has a man in her life. The new dresses and elaborate dinners are a dead giveaway but she's not talking, and Tom and Norman are doing a lot of uncomfortable guessing.

MOD SQUAD. 7:30 p.m., Channels 4 and 8. Is There Anyone Left in Santa Paula? Fernando Lamas has a featured role, as the policeman who spent 20 years of his career helping the Mexican-American community. Now, he's about to throw it all up by helping a young man who is sought by immigration

RED SKELTON. 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Audrey Meadows has the featured part, as the mother of Junior, that mean little kid who decides that early Sunday morning is a good time to wake mother. Red is an old man with a gleam in his eye and fond memories, in the Silent Spot.

TELESCOPE. 8:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Snow in Venice Canadian film-maker and artist Michael Snow is interviewed in Venice. Against the historic backdrop of that world-famous city of beauty he talks about his career, and art and creativity ROOM 222. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8. The Laughing Majority. Harvey Butcher, Whitman High's plump practical joker, is determined to mock school elections. He launches a zany campaign for the class presidency, but it backfires.

JOHNNY CASH. 9 p.m., Channel 8. Old Satchmo, Louis Armstrong, is the featured guest. Also appearing are Tennessee Ernie Ford, Kenny Rogers and the First Edition, June Carter, Carl Perkins and the Statler Brothers. Johnny sings Ring of Fire and Children Go Where I Send Thee.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

One method of treating duodenal ulcers (ulceration of the duodenum, the first 12 inches of bowel coming out from the stomach) and has been tried in the past, and is stil too often stomach) and has been tried in the past, and is stil too often done today, is the cutting of the two vagus nerves (two very long) nerves that run from the brain to the lower part of the bowel). The theory behind doing this was probably that since a duodenal ulcer is nearly always due to mental strain and unhappiness and worry, if we were to cut the nerves coming from the brain, the bowel would not react with irritation as it normally does to mental upsets. Actually, this theory did not proye to be true.

Back in 1826, when as gastroenterologist I was much interested in how to cure ulcers of the stomach and bowel, I decided to have my research laboratory at the Mayo Clinic see if cutting the two vagus nerves would be well tolerated. I worked mainly on rabbits and soon found that most of those with a vable cut died with a severe diarrhea. Hence, I never cared to ask a surgeon to cut these nerves in man. However, when I searched the literature, I found that some surgeons had been cutting the vagus nerves in man from 1907 onward.

Unfortunately, other doctors were not seriously concerned about the disastrous effects on animals, because during these many years, there have continued to be hundreds of operations to cut the vagus nerves in an attempt to cure duodenal ulcers. Occasionally, this operation worked beautifully, but in perhaps more than 25 per cent of the cases, the patient came back later with a new ulcer which was often worse than the did one. Also with a new ulcer which was often worse than the old one. Also, the person was in many cases left with a diarrhea that could not

I keep marvelling that the operation is still being performed seeing that it cannot be counted on to keep a new ulcer from forming. In my experience with patients with ulcers, I have found that I could give them relief if I could only talk with them and find out what was eating at their heart, or what business problems were causing them much anxiety.

Almost everyone with an ulcer has some psychic problems which at times will appear to be the cause of a flare-up in symptoms. Sometimes the man is a hard-driving fellow who needs to let up on strain and to mend some of his ways. Perhaps the ulcer started when he was meeting heavy competition or the ulcer started when he was meeting heavy competition or taking big losses, and later, recurrences came with unhappiness or worry or resentment. The first patient who taught me this was seen in 1912. He had several hemorrhages about six months apart, every one of which came when an important invention of his gave trouble so that the machinery had to be quickly redesigned.

Many persons with ulcers lose their symptoms the day they shut up the desk at the office and start off for a vacation or a trip to some medical centre for a diagnosis. Others lose their pain the minute they enter a hospital. Often I have said to such a patient with a bad ulcer, "Why submit to an operation with all its hazards when you know you can get well simply by cutting down on the strain of work and life? Why have the plear cut out or on the strain of work and life? Why have the ulcer cut out or sidetracked, or have the nerves to your bowel cut when you are going to go right back into the sort of life that caused this ulcer and may easily give you a new one?"

City, Saanich Merger Urged

begin immediately a program amalgamation to head off ntrol of the area by a regional government domi-nated by rural interests, Victoria council was told Monday.

In what appeared as a speech of farewell as chairman of council's planning committee, Ald. Peter Pollen warned that "a future of frustration and violence for our. children" our children" is inevitable unless urban problems are attacked soon

IMPEDE PROBLEMS

Pollen, whose future as community development chairman awaits Mayor Courtney Haddock's pleasure early next year, warned that a growing regional bureauc-racy could "impede rather than solve urban problems in Greater Victoria Pollen said Victoria should "immediately open" discussions with Saanich with a view to amalgamation.

Four other points crucial to "livable environment":

• Convince the provincial and federal governments that urban areas need better financing.

 Set standards of deyelopment for Greater Vic-toria "that are not based exclusively on the highest and most profitable use of land.' Develop a Greater

Victoria public transit system financed (possibly) through a gasoline tax, to prevent monopoly by the private car.

 Include in the planning departments a "much broader function" that incorporates sociological and environmental considerations.

Pollen referred to his often stormy year as community development chairman as one of "stimulating association" that was "the essence of the emocratic process.

He said the most important accomplishments were slow down "unplanned, ung anized wholesale mercial rape of the Inner Harbor," and making the public aware of the dangers of not acting to cope with "rapidly changing urban life. Without proper planning, Victoria may face: a popula-

The Manchester Guardian LONDON - A new wave of LSD drugtaking is spreading throughout Britain.

Because only the takers who come to harm become to harm become known, statistics are impos-sible to produce. But interviews with psychiatrists, social workers, police and users throughout the country all produce the same picture: · A dramatic rise everyduring the last few contrasting sharply months the earlier situation the use of LSD seemed to be dying out.

· A spread to most parts of the country — including some rural areas and to all groups. Not just intellectuals, tudents or drop-outs.

• Strong suspicion of marijuana smokers "esca-lating" to LSD. Although as drug, it is impossible to attribute increased misuse to any single cause easy availability seems to be playing a great part. PRICES DOWN

This availability has been reflected in falling prices. In one area, the "trip" that cost $4.80 two years ago now costs half that. In some parts of the country, temporary sur-pluses in recent weeks have occasionally brought the price of a trip down to 90 cents.

Ex-General Admits Wooing Major's Wife

By JOHN LEBLANC

LONDON (CP) — A retired major-general admits that he indiscreet letters to a major's wife but denies that he sabotaged his subordinate's promotion because the wife gave him the chill.

It is one of the liveliest military scandals in years here and is occupying—literally— pages in some of the tabloid

Maj. Dawson Cain, now also retired, has a complaint be-fore the war office that a dozen years ago in Germany the general—then a brigadier —deluged his wife with ob-scene phone calls and letters and held up promotion because Mrs. Cain gave him the cold shoulder Gen. St. John Cutler Hooley. kept quiet until Monday night because, as he said, he did not want to spoil his own wife's Christmas. Then he confessed to writing sexy, but not obscene, letters and de-nied doing anything about Cain's promotion.

MUST BE BONKERS

"The man must be bon-rs," the general said. "It would have been impossible for me to have influenced his promotion chances. All the decisions on promotion would have been taken in Whitehall, not in Germany.

director of ordnance supplies for the British Army of the Rhine (NATO) in West Germany. The major was with a unit 15 miles away from the general's headquarters and he and his wife met the general at mess dances.

"I did write those stupid letters," the general said. "I was very silly and I am ashamed. It was what I call a momentary indiscretion, one that I bitterly regret. . . .

"She sent me a picture of herself. I don't remember what was in the letters but they were very stupid. But how many men can look another straight in the eye and say he has not done something of which he is ashamed.

ADMITTS LETTERS

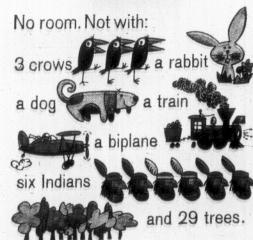

"I have admitted now what I did: I denied it to start with because I did not want my wife to know before Christ-mas. Nor did I want my disgrace to be brought on my MP Alan Glyn has taken up Cain's case with Defence Minister Lord Carrington, and the Army's special investigation branch is to interview the retired general.

"I'm not worried," the general said. "The allegations are sheer rubbish."

No partridge. No pear tree.

It's too bad about the partridge. And the pear tree. We'd add them if we could - just to make our jolly old green-and-red label even more Christmasy. But you can see the problem. We're a little pushed for space. So instead, we'll simply wish you a warm and wonderful Yuletide from all of us here at Molson's. From the rabbit. And the crows. And the dog. Oh, yes - and the people.

GROWING CRISIS IN SPAIN

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1970

Basques Swear Revenge for Death Terms

Basque nationalists swore vengeance today against the military judges who sentenced six Basques to death and nine others to a total of 351 years in prison:

"There will be retaliation," one member of the Basque terrorist organization ETA warned after the court handed down the sentences Monday. He singled out Capt.

the legal adviser to the courtmartial, and another ETA source said of de ETA source said Castro: "He better have a bodyguard."

Denunciations of the death sentences and appeals for clemency poured into Madrid from around the world, and Basque sympathizers or foes of the Franco regime held demonstrations in cities throughout Europe. Some led to violence. In San Sebastian, the Basque capital on Spain's northern coast, youths roamed the streets Monday night overturning cars and smashing windows. A bomb exploded in front of the Spanish consulate in Rome but caused no significant damage. More than 200 demonstrators broke into the Spanish embassy in Brussels and ransacked some of the

EDMONTON (CP) month-old baby boy, missing for four hours, was reunited with his parents Monday night after the car in which he was sleeping was stolen from a shopping centre parking lot.

The baby's mother, Mrs. Dag Wiull, left the baby in the back seat and the car's engine running while she went into the shopping centre to get her husband, an employee there.

When they returned, the car and

About four hours later, a motor-

ist driving in a residential district about two miles from the shopping centre noticed a car idling and stopped to investigate.

He found the baby crying on the front seat and carried him into a nearby house where the residents notified police.

A police spokesman said the baby was apparently well and had suffered no serious effect.

Police believe the ear thief andoned the vehicle when he abandoned noticed the infant.

To Father, Hippie Life Stinks But He's Ordered to Pay for It

NEW YORK (AP) prominent New York lawyer has been ordered to resume support of his 20-year-old daughter, even though he thinks her "hippie" life 'stinks.

If the father does not post a $5,700 support bond, he may have to go to jail, ruled Judge Millard Midonick of the family court.

The appellate division stayed, pending a review, a 30-day jail sentence against the father, which would have been imposed if he had not given the bond by noon Mon-

The girl, a student at the University of Louisville, brought suit against her father after he stopped paying her tuition and other college bills. As is the practice in family court cases, neither has been publicly identified.

However, the Louisville Courier-Journal reached her and she said she is "destitute right now." "I'm looking for a job. In fact, if they order a retrial, I can't afford to go back to New York." The father, "a prominent member of the litigating bar," had acted, Midonick said, be-cause of a 'loss of confi-dence' in his daughter's educational progress.

He rejected the father's allegation that if he were compelled to pay, "any minor would be able to set up housekeeping away from home and scornfully badger the father by court proceedings to underwrite any manner of living approved by mindless courts." The judge chastised the father for his conduct and disagreed with his estimate of the girl's scholastic and emo-tional progress.

Deal With FLO

Minister Denies Charges

Times News Services

MONTREAL-Veteran members of the Quebec Provincial Police were up in arms today over an apparent deal with three FLQ murder suspects when they were captured Monday.

Brothers Paul and Jacques Rose and Francis Simard were captured in an isolated farmhouse near St. Luc. 20 miles southeast of Montreal. Also taken into custody was Michel Viger, 30, who had rented the house in October

IT'S 'SUBTERFUGE' SAYS POLLEN

. . . FOR SAKE OF 'FRAME AND STUCCO'

City Caught Without Apartment Guarantee

Ald. Peter Pollen has charged Victoria city administration with using "subterfuge" to obtain council approval of the controversial proval of the controversial Spencer Castle apartment

Pollen made the statement tollowing discovery at Monday's council meeting that there will not be a $250,000 bond posted with the city to encourage specific performance of building plans, as earlier expected.

Council approved in principle a special development permit for the project, and set Jan. 19 for a public hearing on the permit hearing on the permit.

Pollen and Aldermen Hugh Ramsay and Tom Christie voted against the permit, repeating their opposition to the proposal at a public hearing Dec. 17.

Pollen singled out city manager Dennis Young for criticism, saying "I'm appalled that the city manager has allowed this misinformation to go on so

He added: "I'm appalled that this thing is being sold to the public, to members of council, and to me, obvious subterfuge and misinformation."

As chairman of council's community development com-mittee, Pollen should have been consulted on the form of the permit before the council meeting, he said.

Pollen said the council was led to believe that all three apartment buildings would be block construction. Now only is described in the building permit as a block. The other two. described as "units," are obviously "frame and stucco," he said.

When Pollen asked city r Terry O'Grady whom the $250,000 performance bond is in favor of, O'Grady said as a bond recoverable by the city if the developer fails to carry out the building plans, G'Grady said.

"No bonding company would put up such a bond."

There is no contract between the city and the developer, he added. The performance bond is between the owner and the builder, which in this case are both the same man, Danilo Danzo of Port Alberni. The bond clause in the development permit is "the sort of thing you see on the side of delivery trucks—carpet cleaners . . ." O'Grady

The only protection the city has against non-performance is the regular power to prosecute when zoning regulations are broken, he said.

STORM-TOSSED SEAS and their loads of logs hurtled through this ditch at the foot of Killarney in Saanich Monday, making a shambles of the yards of Mrs. H. A. Jones, whose home is seen at the left of the ditch, and of Mr. and Mrs. Bert de Goey, from whose home this picture was taken. Killarney residents have signed a petition asking that the ditch be closed. The ditch is used by the municipality as a rain drain-off for the area and municipal engineer Neville Life says if the property owners used fill to raise their land above the waterline, the drainoff could then be diverted by ditch along adjacent Waring Place. Q. What are the highest and lowest degrees of tempera-ture recorded in Victoria?

A. The weatherman says Victoria's coldest day came on Dec. 29, 1968, when the mercury plunged to 3.8 tenths of a degree separate the hottest and second hottest days in Victoria's history. Worst sizzler was July 17, 1941, when the thermometer jumped to 95.2 degrees F. and second worst was June 25. 1925, when it was 95 degrees.

Rural Domination Of Region Denied

Comments by a Victoria alderman about regional government are "riddled with inaccuracies," Saanich mayor and Capital Regional District board chairman, Hugh Curtis, said today.

He was replying to Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen, who urged amalgamation of the city and Saanich to head off control of the area by a reg government dominated rural interests. (See Page 29)

Curtis pointed to the vote and director distribution on the regional board and said the more populated parts have the weight of votes.

There are 18 directors on the regional board holding a total of 43 votes. Of these, eight directors having 31 votes are from Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esqui-

"I think the distribution of voting strength is quite satisfactory " Curtis said. "We must consider the area an entity instead of wasting our breath on con-sidering the core only.

"The region, for those who are experiencing it and working with it, is the most important and most useful vehicle which any area could hope for. Quite obviously region is spending more time considering those functions which will serve the largest number of people so the urban purpose is served and Nothing is changed. All is quiet, even the sad-colored birds of the season are hushed. No cardinals or tana-gers there. The best we can expect on a lucky walk is a flight of cedar waxwings, or maybe a blue-and-sooty Stel-

The woods themselves are subdued, no color stronger than a faded yellow against a subdued, background of browns and blacks and greys.

This year, the snowberries that no creature seems to eat spangle the wiry bushes that crowd in on the path. We use those clusters, along with other wild ingredients, in the shaggy wreath I hang on our door each December. But

They break any wind that's blow-ing, and the air, when we leave them for the other world of the foreshore is noticeably cooler.

The destructive sea has dealt kindly with our shore-strip for once. Not only did the gales of a windy month spare the last short stair-flight which I count on rebuilding each spring — a chance-flung timber balk has wedged beneath it to anchor it more firmly.

But those same pounding seas have given the beach a thorough working-over, and may again before the South Island's mild substitute for authentic winter has run its

Uvic Probes Skylark Decline

A committee to determine the size of the present campus skylark population has been established by the

has been established by the University of Victoria. It will also suggest methods for maintaining birdlife on the campus, Roderick Haig-Brown, Uvic chancellor, said Monday.

The chancellor is concerned about the rapid decline of the skylark population on the Saanich Peninsula. The annual Christmas bird count carried out by members of the Victoria Natural History Society found only 24 skylarks o nthe peninsula as opposed to 51 last year.

The university is partly to blame for the decline as it has plowed up fields—the habitat of the skylark—to make lawns.

Haig-Brown said the committee's first goal will be to get a proper estimate of the skylark population and to prepare a detailed plan of all areas of land owned by the campus.

Baby Stolen With Car, Returned to Parents

month-old baby boy, missing for four hours, was reunited with his parents Monday night after the car in which he was sleeping was stolen from a shopping centre parking lot.

The baby's mother, Mrs. Dag Wiull, left the baby in the back seat and the car's engine running while she went into the shopping centre to get her husband, an employee there.

When they returned, the car and baby were missing.

About four hours later, a motorist driving in a residential district about two miles from the shopping centre noticed a car idling and stopped to investigate.

He found the baby crying on the front seat and carried him into a nearby house where the residents

A police spokesman said the baby was apparently well and had suffered no serious effect.

Police believe the car thief abandoned the vehicle when he noticed the infant.
